The session by Louise Evans titled "Own your behavior, Master your communication, Determine your success" the expert introduces a powerful metaphor called "The 5 Chairs," which represents different ways people show up in communication and life. She explained that each chair corresponds to a choice in how we respond in any moment- from the Red Chair (judging or attacking others) and Yellow Chair (self-judgment and fear) to more constructive positions like the Green Chair (pausing to reflect mindfully), the Blue Chair (assertive self-expression), and the Purple Chair (compassionate empathy). Evans stresses that by becoming aware of which "chair" we are sitting in, we can take responsibility for our behavior, improve how we relate to others, and ultimately foster healthier communication, deeper connections, and greater personal and professional success.
