About the Program-

The Department of Gynaecology & Obstetrics organised "ANKUR" – Women's Health Awareness Exhibition as an interdisciplinary teaching-learning activity. The exhibition provided a platform for students from Homoeopathy, Ayurveda and Nursing to interact, exchange knowledge and understand women's health from a multidisciplinary perspective.

Highlights of the Activity

Third-Year BHMS students prepared and presented various educational charts, live models, working models and interactive activities on important topics including:

- Menstrual cycle and menstrual hygiene
- Foetal circulation
- Abnormal vaginal discharge
- Breast examination and breast cancer awareness
- Family planning
- Hysterectomy
- Immunisation schedule
- Postnatal care
- PCOD and fibroids
- AI-based learning models related to Gynaecology

Interdisciplinary Interaction

Students from Ayurveda and Nursing visited the exhibition and actively interacted with the Third-Year BHMS students. They observed the models, discussed various women's health topics and exchanged knowledge from their respective disciplines. The activity promoted collaborative learning, interdisciplinary understanding, communication skills and team-based healthcare education.

Outcome

The exhibition provided students with an opportunity to apply their academic knowledge through practical demonstrations and interactive learning while enhancing their presentation and communication skills. The participation of Ayurveda and Nursing students strengthened the interdisciplinary approach and facilitated meaningful knowledge exchange.

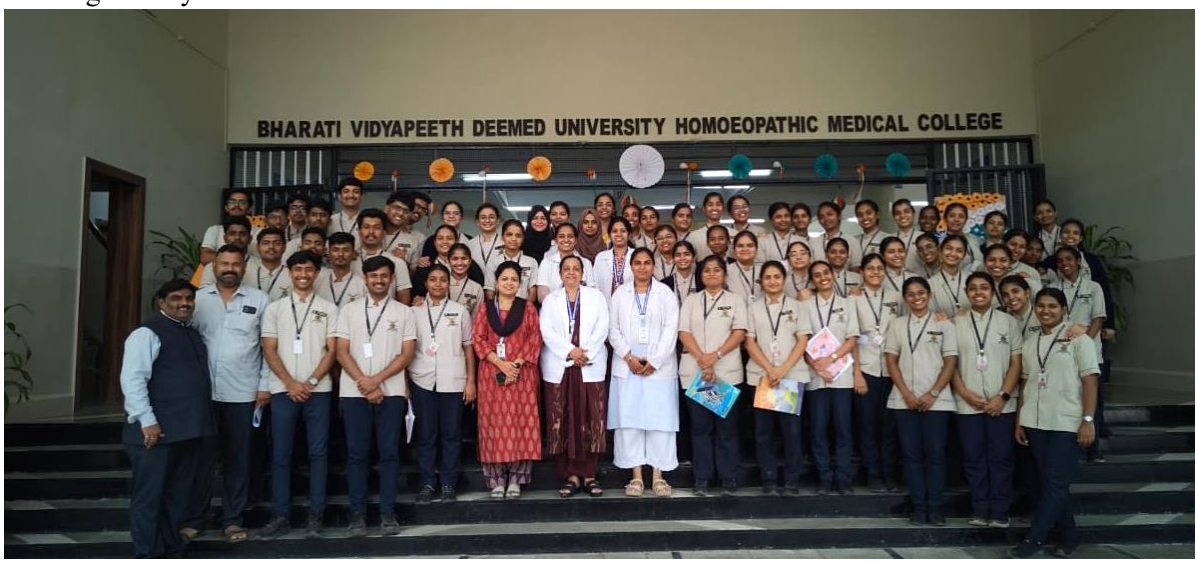

Conclusion

The ANKUR Exhibition was successfully conducted as an interdisciplinary activity, fostering collaboration and knowledge sharing among students of Homoeopathy, Ayurveda and Nursing and promoting a holistic approach towards women's healthcare.
